Crisis

- A majority say the election winner should nominate Ruth Bader Ginsburg's replacement.
- Mitch McConnell is unpopular and a majority oppose him bringing a nominee for a vote in the Senate before Election Day.
- The most convincing reasons to delay confirmation until after the election are prioritizing the pandemic response and Senate Republicans pushing through a Justice after refusing to hold hearings for Obama's nominee.

Progressives Clearly Win Back and Forth Debate Over Timing of SCOTUS Pick

By a 15-point margin, more agree since Obama’s nominee was not considered in 2016 since it was an election year, no hearings should be held for Trump’s pick either – while just one in three say the vacancy should be filled right away.

- A third of independents (31%) are undecided.

When it comes to the debate around the Supreme Court, who do you agree with more?

Those who say that when President Obama was in the same situation, Mitch McConnell and Senate Republicans said no nominee should be considered in an election year and refused to hold hearings on Obama’s nominee for 10 months. With just six weeks until the election and early votes already being cast, the same rules should apply – no hearings for Trump’s nominee so that the American people can have their voices heard

Those who say that nominating Supreme Court justices is one of Donald Trump’s constitutional responsibilities as President and he should act now to ensure the Supreme Court is filled. We shouldn’t let a vacancy stay open for political considerations, it should be filled right away so the Supreme Court is prepared to do its job as it will face many important decisions soon

Among Persuadables, Distraction from Pandemic is Most Convincing Reason to Wait Until After Election for SCOTUS

Please indicate how convincing each is as a reason to support waiting until after the election and letting whoever wins the election pick Ruth Bader Ginsburg's replacement.

	% Very Convincing
	Overall	Base	Movers
Senate Republicans refused to hold hearings and a vote on President Obama's election year nominee for 10 months. The same rules should apply to President Trump and now with just six weeks until this election and many people already starting to vote , no hearings should be held for Donald Trump's nominee	47	86	48
The Senate should be focused on one thing – getting us out of the pandemic and helping our economy recover , including addressing unemployment – but right now, they refuse to do any of that. The Senate should not drop everything to rush a Supreme Court nomination, while they refuse to act on our health, safety, and economy in this pandemic	46	77	59
The American people should have a voice in the selection of their next Supreme Court Justice for a lifetime appointment . Americans are already starting to vote in many places and with the election just a few weeks away, this vacancy should not be filled until the American people have voted and made their voice heard	46	80	46
Right now, America is more divided than it ever has been, and the country is in constant turmoil and chaos – all in the middle of a pandemic. A big, rushed political fight over the Supreme Court before the election will only add to the chaos and division and make things worse. We need to wait until after the election	46	81	50
The average number of days from nomination to confirmation for current Supreme Court Justices is 78 days because it takes time to ensure a nominee is qualified to be a lifetime member of the Court. Right now, there are less than 50 days until the election and rushing it would place politics ahead of ensuring we have a qualified judge	43	77	48
The Trump administration is already going to court to overturn the Affordable Care Act and Trump's Supreme Court nominee could tip the balance on the Court to strike it down, which would end protections for patients with pre-existing conditions, raise costs for seniors, and lead to over 20 million Americans losing their coverage entirely – all in the middle of a pandemic	43	75	50
There are already four votes on the Supreme Court to overturn Roe v. Wade . If another vote against Roe v. Wade is put on the Supreme Court, then it will rule to abolish a woman's right to choose , and put many other basic fundamental rights and freedoms at risk	40	72	42
President Trump is doing everything he can to rig the election in his favor in case the election once again is decided by the Supreme Court . Mitch McConnell and Trump are rushing so they have a loyal justice that will rule in their favor if the election is close	40	75	34
In the days leading up to her death, Ruth Bader Ginsburg said in a statement, "My most fervent wish is that I will not be replaced until a new President is installed." President Trump and Senate Republicans should honor her dying wish	40	69	41

"Base" are defined as those who say it is wrong for the Senate to hold hearings and a vote for Trump's nominee to the Supreme Court both before and after messaging. "Movers" are defined as those who initially say it is right or are not sure about whether or not the Senate should hold hearings and a vote for Trump's nominee to the Supreme Court but, after messaging, say it is wrong. Opposition to Pre-Election SCOTUS Nomination Grows After Messaging

Before hearing arguments for waiting until after the election to confirm a new justice, there is a 5-point advantage in the share who say it would be wrong for the Senate to hold a vote on Trump’s nominee to the Supreme Court before the November election. After, there is an 18-point advantage that “it would be wrong.”

If Trump nominates someone soon, do you think it would be right or wrong for the U.S. Senate to hold hearings and a vote for Trump’s nominee to the Supreme Court before the November election?

The Affordable Care Act Weighs Heaviest On the Minds of Americans Thinking About Court Rulings

While the Affordable Care Act is a top issue across party lines for Americans in terms of how the Court decides future cases, other issues like racial justice and immigration are more divided by partisanship.
